Hands on History!

The National Society Sons of the American Revolution can provide qualified members dressed in period-correct 18th Century uniforms for classroom hands-on history classroom programs. Our knowledgeable presenters can spark student interest by letting the students experience what it was like during the Colonial period. Presenters use "Patriot Chest" teaching aids such as reproduction period items like eyeglasses, documents, colonial eating utensils, quills, plates, games, toys, and period clothing.

Students will receive a short introduction about the American War for Independence by the presenter and a description of 18th-century clothing and accoutrements. This is interactive program on the colonial period will engage students who will be able to see and feel history and ask questions about our nation's founding era.
